

The 20th National & International Conference
"Strengthen knowledge to drive education and integrate across sciences for sustainable development"

December 3, 2025. Online Conference via Zoom meeting

In the era of globalization and the complexities of the 21st century, education and knowledge creation play a vital role in driving social, economic, and cultural advancement toward progress and sustainability. Factors influencing development at local, national, and international levels are no longer confined to the transmission of knowledge within a single discipline. Instead, they require the integration of knowledge across multiple fields to build a holistic understanding that can genuinely respond to the challenges of the modern world. Current challenges—such as digital technological transformation, climate change adaptation, social inequality, human capital development, and innovation for sustainable development—demand lifelong learning processes that emphasize the co-creation of knowledge and the interconnection of various disciplines, including science, social sciences, humanities, and management. These efforts align with the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), aiming to foster balanced and sustainable growth.

The 20th National and International Conference on Strengthen knowledge to drive education and integrate across sciences for sustainable development is therefore of great significance. It serves as an academic platform for scholars, researchers, students, policymakers, and professionals to present research, creative works, and innovations, as well as to exchange academic perspectives and practical experiences. Furthermore, this conference plays a crucial role in strengthening academic collaboration networks both domestically and internationally, contributing to the enhancement of research quality and elevating educational standards to meet global benchmarks.

This conference is not only a venue for disseminating research but also a driving force for structural transformation in education, knowledge creation, and cross-disciplinary innovation. It aims to strengthen the capacity of Thai society and the global community to face emerging challenges and build a secure and sustainable future.

Objective

1. To provide a platform for exchanging knowledge, research, and innovations among academics, researchers, and practitioners at national and international levels.
2. To promote cross-disciplinary integration in research and innovation development that can effectively address the problems and challenges of modern society.
3. To strengthen networks of collaboration among universities, government agencies, the private sector, and international organizations in advancing education and social development.
4. To enhance the capacity of researchers, academics, and students in critical thinking, analysis, synthesis, and the practical application of knowledge.
